By purchasing your WOW account you will experience fulfilment, allowing numerous gamers to advance in higher play levels, new classes as well as save valuable time. Less than 1% of the many thousands of wow account purchases get stolen back, however; WOW account resellers want to give you the knowledge of understanding the risk. They take the upmost care and untouchable background in the industry when it comes to securing your account. No account will be taken away as a result of their interaction. If there is ever a problem with your WOW account purchased from internet WOW account resellers contact them immediately.

They will lose common sense and courtesy to review every situation and always have customer satisfaction in mind. The value of an WOW account depends on different factors such as, server, level, class equipment and skills, as well as supply and demand at any time for the account based on all of the account's characteristics. Even though they understand that gamers' believe their account may be worth more than the bid offer, their bidding system is made to offer the most they can at the present time of the submission. In this circumstance, you can wait and resubmit in the future, but there are no guarantees that there will be any kind of change on the bid.

In the event that there is something special about your WOW account and you deny the bid, you are welcome to put relevant information as well as links in the comments box for further review. Within 72 hours a new bid may be emailed to you only if the appraisal team believes your account to have a greater value, however; if you haven't received anything within that time there will be no bid change. There are no corners to cut to answer this question, but there are always some rules to follow when selling an WOW account along with some professional free tips. You must make sure your wow accounts has full equipment slots filled, as well as your best gear in those slots that are listed in your profile.

Having the WOW account subscribed is very important and will affect the price, having an epic mount will give you more points. Have all expansions enabled to make sure you get the fullest out of your WOW account. WOW account resellers have fraud and security detection software during the account validation step. Your WOW account will be rejected in the interest of keeping their high-level of quality and service if your account info links with previous fraudulent activity. They understand that many WOW accounts are bought and resold and not all clients who have this rejection are committing fraud. They sincerely apologize to any client that this pertains too. There is some restrictions like, being unable to move from normal to PVP realms, a benefit is being allowed to change your name upon moving to a new server. You can also move the character to a new account, only if you follow the specific guidelines. This will deny the past owner from ever taking over the WOW online account.
