In the good old days, pre-recession, Holidays to Las Vegas were commonplace. Brits love CSI and the long running and famously grisly crime series sent hundreds of thousands of UK holidaymakers Vegas-wards. A number of hardy types, gap year students and confident backpackers hit Vegas to explore the seedy underbelly as well as enjoy that deceptively glittery façade.

So is all this state-side adventure and glamour out of reach now the dollar is stronger and we've been plunged into recession? Not according to online holiday price comparison website BeatTheBrochure.com. They believe that the US holiday market is still strong in the UK, mostly thanks to price comparison websites.

"In today's climate it's more important than ever to hunt down the best holiday deal. Like all destinations, you can still track down good value holidays to Las Vegas if you know where to go. While holiday price comparison sites are ten a penny, ours uses totally unique price comparison technology to search multiple suppliers in one go, delivering the very best price."

If you're prepared to rough it a bit you can make massive savings. If you fancy immersing yourself in the real Vegas find yourself a seedy roadside Motel to stay in, hire a taxi to navigate you through the backstreets and scrubby suburban desert. Or track down a friendly local to show you the ropes. And steer clear of the Casinos!

As far as getting the best value holidays to Las Vegas are concerned, BeatTheBrochure does exactly what it says on the tin. It searches all the major tour operators - including Thomson, First Choice and Thomas Cook - returning the lowest prices and the best deals, first time.

If you can beat their prices they want to know about it. "We're so confident in the capabilities of our technology that we're ready to take up the challenge. Take the BeatTheBrochure challenge and see. If you find lower price holidays to Las Vegas feel free to get in touch and give us a hard time... we're waiting to hear from you!"
