NEW YORK – Cost should not be a factor for getting sober and staying that way, but unfortunately that is the reality for many individuals who are addicted to drugs and alcohol.

With no end in sight for skyrocketing health care costs, drug addiction treatment is out of the reach for those who just can't afford the very high daily costs of treatment. Fortunately, over 12 years ago, Mountainside Drug Rehab and Alcohol Treatment Center in Connecticut answered that challenge by being one of the first drug addiction treatment centers to offer affordable drug rehab.

“Living a full life- a life free of drugs and alcohol shouldn't belong to the privileged few who can afford treatment, ” begins a spokesperson for Mountainside. “We've always believed that everyone should have an equal chance at sobriety, so we designed a unique and comprehensive treatment program that virtually eliminates cost as a factor. Since we began our program, others within the treatment field began to pay close attention to what we were doing, particularly when the then White House Drug Czar, John Walters, invited Mountainside to Washington to discuss the effectiveness of our program. Since then, our program has become the model for drug rehabs worldwide.”

An innovative approach to drug rehab is necessary to successful recovery and Mountainside's drug addiction treatment program combines several innovative facets of treatment into one cohesive program. Their sobriety success rates are unparalleled in the field, and they credit such long-term success to their unique and innovative treatment program.

While there are many different treatment philosophies utilized throughout the industry, the one that has been found to be most effective is an individualized approach to treatment— at Mountainside, each person is evaluated and given what he or she personally needs on their journey to recovery. Mountainside pioneered such an approach and has helped thousands achieve long-term sobriety.

For more than 12 years, Mountainside Drug Rehab and Alcohol Treatment Center has led the way in offering an innovative and individualized alcohol and drug addiction treatment program.
